Objektbeschreibung

The house

The wonderful top floor apartment is located in a gem from the Wilhelminian period, a palace built by Ignaz Drapla in 1874-1875. The building was later equipped with a new facade in 1913-1914, in 1915-1916 another reconstruction of the ground floor was carried out by Oskar Strnad. The style of the facade is neo-baroque, the old building is in very good condition. Upon entering the building, a representative entrance awaits you with terrazzo flooring, stone steps and wrought iron railings with wooden handrails. The staircase is decorated with stucco decorations on the ceiling and walls. The entrance is crowned by a sculpture owned by the seller. In the years 1992 to 1994 the attic was converted. From the five balconies you have a stunning view. Directly opposite you can see the Liechtenstein Park and the Liechtenstein Garden Palace, to the left you can see the Leopoldsberg, straight ahead to the Danube Tower and on the right to St. Stephen's Cathedral.

The attic maisonette

A total of nine rooms, two bathrooms, a storage room, a guest toilet and east, south and west-facing balconies await you in this extraordinary apartment with around 255 m² of living space. Beautiful parquet floors, some with marble applications, light-colored tiles and marble in the bathrooms and attractive room heights ensure a pleasant feeling of space. In the living room there is a cozy warmth thanks to the open fireplace, in the master bedroom you sleep under a spectacular glass/steel construction under the starry sky. A basement compartment of around 58 m² provides the necessary storage space. A double garage (approx. 32 m²) with an electric entrance gate in the courtyard of the house can be purchased as an option.

The room layout

You enter this remarkable property in an anteroom that offers enough space for the cloakroom. From here the hallway leads to both sides of the first attic floor. On the right you reach the living area, which houses the kitchen, dining area, living room and library or office. Two more rooms, a bathroom, a storage room, the laundry room and a guest toilet complete the space on this level. From the hall two stairs lead up to the second attic floor. The upper living level is arranged in two separate living areas. Each of the living areas is accessed via one of the two staircases. In the first living area you will find a library with a sunny balcony oriented towards the park garden of the house. Located next is the master bedroom with a spectacular glass facade, two small balconies and access to the dressing room and the ensuite bathroom. The second staircase leads to another living area with offers a bedroom, balcony, a dressing room and a bathroom as well.
